Hungry for good information?

Join us at the Tampa Heights Community Garden to explore how bees and other pollinators help provide what we eat. Our featured speaker is Miriam Jenkins. Mimi holds a PhD in wildlife biology from Clemson University, where her research focused on supporting wild pollinators on watermelon farms with wildflower strips. Passionate about translating science and current issues in biology to the public, she helps at the Sustainable Living Project, an urban farm and education center, in her spare time.

A delicious Vegan lunch will be provided courtesy of #GardenSteps.
A guided bike ride to the garden will leave from County Center at 11:35AM.
*If this outdoor event is rained out, the back up location is the County Center in

Space is limited to 25 people.

RSVP no later than 5PM on 09.24.19
